READY TO KILLEBRATE? MARRIAGE CAN BE MURDER LAUNCHES VIRTUAL SHOW
The good old-fashioned whodunnit serves up a virtual twist

LAS VEGAS – Grab your quarantini and get ready to play detective alongside the outlandishly eager lieutenant, wacky hostess, and a suspect hiding amongst the computer screen. Marriage Can Be Murder's award-winning dinner show will take over the world-wide-web for their first official virtual performance, Quarantined to Death, on Friday May 29 at 6:30 p.m. with the virtual lobby opening at 6:00 p.m. for check-in. Additional showtimes this week are Saturday at 3:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.

“Marriage Can Be Murder can never die,” laughed actor and creator Eric Post. “Our killer team has been using down time during quarantine to evoke new concepts and bring Vegas’ favorite dinner show back to life. Virtually, that is.”

Guests will jump into the interactive murder-mystery fun, working with the actors through video chat to solve a quarantine-style crime. Immersed in the action, sleuths make their way through breakout rooms including a bar and a cop lair where they bribe and find clues to unravel the story.

To keep up with the dinner show concept, Marriage Can Be Murder encourages guests to support their favorite restaurant by ordering takeout to enjoy during the show. Our detectives are sleuthing for a dinner component as an optional add on for guests in the coming weeks.

Ticket Tiers

Tickets are on sale now at ivorystar.com. Guests will participate via a private Zoom link on computer, laptop, tablet or phone. With one of the show’s optional Marriage Can Be Murder customized Zoom backgrounds, attendees can stand out on the screen for the whodunit fun. Limited Zoom cells are available.

RIP Upgrades: It's not too late to spice up the party. Just like being part of the traditional show, RIP Upgrades will allow for additional interaction during the virtual fun. Guests can add on extra elements to their ticket, such as “bribes” for a bartender or cop to support actors in the show. They can also provide information about good news being celebrated for an A.P.B. special shoutout like birthdays, anniversaries or even a negative COVID-19 test. More details available upon purchase.
